"Feds: Greater Boston Sex-Ring Included Quincy Brothel"

"Enticed by ads in Chinese newspapers, the immigrant women were lured into the sex trade, then forced to stay. Ads for escort services in the Boston Phoenix and on Craigslist lured the clients, who carried out their transactions in brothels in Quincy and other Greater Boston communities...

Federal authorities laid out those details following the arrest of five people described as the architects of a lucrative sex-trafficking business that operated for at least the past five years.

Three defendants from Quincy were arraigned in U.S. District Court in Boston..."

The Support to End Exploitation Now (SEEN) is a groundbreaking partnership among more than 35 public and private agencies who believe that only genuine collaboration can yield positive outcomes for exploited youth. SEEN operates on a community-wide response model that is built upon mutual understanding and trust, and the belief that youth empowerment and offender accountability are not mutually exclusive.
